

“LBF Birdies for Childhood Brain Cancer” charity golf event today at P.B. Dye golf club was an enormous success. The rain and little sun did not discourage participation as seen by the large turnout. Upon being asked by Steve Bosdosh, guest pro at the event, Nicole Giroux, Executive Director of the The Lilabean Foundation for Pediatric Brain Cancer Research, and mother of Lilabean, responded to Steve’s concerns about the weather, “Rain or shine, 11 children will be diagnosed with brain cancer today.” Steve’s response was, “I am going to set up.”

Steve’s clinic started slowly due to the rain but as the shot gun starting time got closer, the driving range became alive, and the excited golfers collected around Steve. Supporters had a wonderful time and all for a great cause.

Steve was excited to know that, Jack Rolle, one of his students, whom he taught periodically over three years, volunteered his time for LBF Foundation. This new graduate stood in the rain, on hole 8 a par 3, and hit tee shots for each group that played. Jack Rolle understood the importance of this event in helping children with brain cancer as he is a survivor himself. What a great cause in the fight against cancer. The game of golf brought together for this worthy cause a lot of support, awareness, contributions - not to mention a lot of love.
